

National Council on Radiation Protection and Measurements (NCRP) and the Alliance for Radiation Safety in Pediatric Imaging Offer Free Parent Education Materials

In 2008, NCRP joined the Alliance for Radiation Safety in Pediatric Imaging, a coalition of 34 healthcare organizations serving over 400,000 healthcare providers worldwide. The Alliance goal is simple: to raise awareness of opportunities to lower radiation dose used in pediatric imaging exams through its informational “Image Gently” campaign (www.imagegently.org).

The Alliance has developed new materials to educate parents about medical imaging and to help them track their child’s past imaging exams:

“My Child’s Medical Imaging Record” allows parents to record where and when a study was performed as well as the type of radiologic exam. Parents are encouraged to:

- use this record in a manner similar to the widely-used vaccination record; and
- request that their future medical providers make decisions regarding optimal timing of additional radiologic examinations with a better understanding of their child’s imaging history.

“What Parents Should Know About CT Scans for Children: Medical Radiation Safety” and “What Parents Should Know About Medical Radiation Safety” are downloadable patient education brochures that provide lay definitions for various imaging exams which utilize radiation and educate parents of the benefits and potential risks associated with these studies. These brochures provide dose estimates in comparison to natural background radiation, discuss possible alternative examinations that do not utilize radiation, and equip parents with questions to ask their imaging providers so that they can make better informed decisions regarding their child’s care.

The imaging record card and the patient brochures are available at www.imagegently.org. A special section of the Image Gently website will also be dedicated to providing parents with the most up-to-date information regarding children’s imaging and tools to help them become better informed healthcare consumers and advocates for their children.

We invite you to download the materials from the Image Gently web site, www.imagegently.org, and make them available to parents in their waiting rooms and offices. We also urge you to make your referring physicians aware of these resources and direct them to the Image Gently website.
